A unique feature of the corpora from English-Corpora.org is the ability to click on the corpus results to find and use external resources related to a word or phrase. In all seventeen of the corpora, the "results" page for a search contains a number of links to external resources. For example, the following are the results for healthy NOUN in the one billion word COCA corpus (the Corpus of Contemporary American English):

Definition of trail

verb (used with object)

- 1 to drag or let drag along the ground or other surface; draw or drag along behind.

trail (v.)

c. 1300, "to hang down loosely and flow behind" (of a gown, sleeve, etc.), from Old French trailer "to tow; pick up the scent of a quarry," ultimately from Vulgar Latin **tragulare* "to drag," from Latin tragula "dragnet, javelin thrown by a strap," probably related to trahere "to pull" (see tract (n.1)). Transitive sense of "to tow or pull along the ground" is from c. 1400. The meaning "follow the trail of (an animal, etc.)" is first recorded late 14c. Meaning "to lag behind" is from 1957. Related: Trailed; trailing.

early 14c., "trailing part of a robe, gown, etc.," from trail (v.). The meaning "track or smell left by a person or animal" is also from 1580s. Meaning "path or track worn in wilderness" is attested from 1600s.

How to pronounce vaccine in American English (2 out of 3898)

vaccination (n.)

1800, used by British physician Edward Jenner (1749-1823) for the technique he publicized of preventing smallpox by injecting people with the similar but much milder cowpox virus (vario vaccinae), from vaccine (adj.) “pertaining to cows, from cows” (1798), from Latin vaccinus “of cows,” from vacca “cow,” a word of uncertain origin. A mild case of cowpox rendered one immune thereafter to smallpox. “The use of the term for diseases other than smallpox is due to Pasteur” [OED].

The earlier 18c. method of smallpox protection in England was by a kind of inoculation called variolation (from variola, the medical Latin word for “smallpox”). There are two forms of smallpox: a minor one that killed 2% or less of the people who got it, and a virulent form that killed about a 30% mortality rate and typically left survivors with severe scarring and often blinded them. Those who got the minor form were noted to be immune thereafter to the worse. Doctor would deliberately infect healthy young patients with a local dose of the minor smallpox, usual resulting in a mild case of it at worst, to render them immune to the more deadly form. Jenner method was safer, as it involved no smallpox exposure.
